Poetry.
The Old Mill.
Don't you remember, Lily dear,
The mill by the old mill side, Where we used to go in the summer time,
And watch the foaming tide?
And the leaves of the fragrant beech,
On the bank so smooth and bright,
When they floated away like everalls, In a flood of golden light.

And the miller, love, with his slouchy cap,
And eyes of mildest gray, Pleading about his dusty work, Singing the live-long day!
And the coat that hung on the rusty nail,
With many a mottled patch,
And the rattle of the mill's broken mill,
And the string and the wooden latch.

And the water wheel with its giant arms,
And the miller's boy, who used to play,
And the weeds that pulled from the sand below,
And the toad in the stream below,
And the sleepers, Lily, with moss o'er grown, Like sentinels stood in pride, Breaking the waves where the chinks of time Were made in the old mill's side.

Lily, the mill is torn away,
And the factory dark and high, Looms like a tower, and puffs its smoke, Over the clear blue sky.
And the river is turned away above,
And the bed of the stream is bare,
And the beech is withered, lough and trunk,
And stands like a spectre there.

And the miller, Lily, is dead and gone, His sleepers in the vale below,
I saw his stone in the winter time, Under a drift of snow.
And now the mill is gone and still,
And the wind is soft and still,
I send you a spring to remind you, love,
Of him and the dear old mill.

Literature.
The Impromptu Marriage.
From the London Family Herald.

"For Heaven's sake, Susy, do be serious, if you can, for five minutes. Pray, pray cease this trifling, which is but cruel playing with my feelings, and let us treat this subject, as it deserves, soberly and seriously."
"Well, then, then!" cried the laughing, black-eyed girl, to whom Charles Westley spoke. "There, then, is that grave earnest See, the corners of my mouth are duly turned down, and my eyes rolled up, and I am as sober as a patient who has caught sight of the dentist's instruments. Do I not suit you?"

"You suit me anyhow, and you know it well enough," cried Charles, gazing, with a smile at the pretty face, puckered up in its affectation of demureness. But he was not to be driven from his point, and he resumed, gravely, after a pause, "The time has come, Susy, when I feel I have a right to demand an explicit answer to my suit. You have trifled with my earnest feelings long enough. I have grown restless under my letters."

"Shake them off, then, Charles!" interrupted the saucy girl, with a pretty defiant toss of her head, which playfully said, "I defy you to do it."

"I cannot, Susy—and you know it," replied the hapless lover, impatiently.
"That being the case," said Susy, "take my advice—wear them gracefully, and don't pull and jerk so; it only makes them hurt you."

"The young man turned away, and walked silently up and down the room, evidently fretting and fuming internally. Susy, meantime, looked out of the window and yawned. Charles

"Oh, what a beautiful bird is on the lilactree!" cried Susy, suddenly. "Do come and see it."

Charles mechanically approached the window and looked out.
"Don't you think, Charles?" said Susy, laying her hand on his arm, and looking up eagerly in his face; "don't you think you could manage to—"

"What, Susy dear?" asked Charles, all his tenderness awakened by her manner.—
"What?"

"Drop a pinch of snuff on his back," returned the provoking girl, with an affection of simplicity; "for then, you know, you could easily catch it."

His answer was to turn angrily away.
His walk this time was longer than before. and his cogitations were more earnest; for he did not heed any of Susy's artfully artless devices to allure his notice. At last he stopped abruptly before her, and said, "Susy, for three long years I have been your suitor, without either confession of love or promise of marriage on your part. Often as I have demanded to know your sentiments towards me, you have always condescendingly fused me an answer. This state of things must cease. I love you better than my life; I will no longer be your plaything. To-morrow you are going away to a distance, to be absent for months, and if you cannot, this very day, throw aside your coquetry and give me an honest 'yes' for my answer, I shall consider that I have received a 'no,' and act accordingly."

"And how would that be?" said Charles, moving to the door; but a dreadful thought struck him, he turned, exclaiming, "Susy, you do not think that—"

"That I am going to die!" said she, anticipating him. "No, Charles, but I want to see a clergyman."

Charles went, and soon returned, accompanyed by a minister.
"I thank you, sir, for coming to me," said Susy to the latter, as he entered. "I have a strange request to make to you. Would you object, sir, in the presence, and with the consent of my mother, to unite me to that gentleman?"

If the minister was astonished at this request, Charles was infinitely more so.— "What do you say, Susy?" said he. "Did I hear aright?"

"I believe so," said Susy, smiling at his esgar amazement. "Does the scheme meet your approval?"

"It was heaven inspired!" cried the poor fellow, frantic with joy—but a shade coming over his radiant face, he added gravely, "But, you have just considered? Remember, I want your free consent, not your gratitude. I will be satisfied with nothing less."

"Do not be concerned about that dear Charles," replied Susy, gazing at him very tenderly through her tears; "be assured you "If you are not in love now, you never will be," returned Charles, sturdily, "and I will have my answer now or never."

"Never, then," laughed Susy. But she had gone a step too far. Her often severely tried love was now too much in earnest to bear her trifling any longer.

"Never, be it then!" he cried; and seizing his hat, he strode from the room.
Susy listened to his receding footsteps with dismay. Had she, indeed, by her incorrigible love of coquetry, lost him? It smote her to the soul to think so. As she heard him open the front door, impelled by a feeling of despair, she raised the window-sash, and, leaning forward, whispered,

"Charles, Charles! you will be at the boat to-morrow to bid me good-by, won't you? I surely we are still friends?"

As she spoke, she tore a rose from her bosom and threw it to him. It lodged on his arm, but he brushed it away, as though it had been poison, and passed on without looking up.

Susy spent the rest of that day in tears.— Early the next morning the bustle of departure began. Susy was going to accompany her widowed and invalid mother on a trip for her health.

As they reached the wharf and descended from the carriage, Susy's eyes made themselves busy searching for one wished-for face; but it was nowhere to be seen.

The steamboat lay panting and puffing, seemingly impatient to be let loose. Susy's mother, aided by the servant-man who accompanied them, had already crossed the gangway which lay between the wharf and the boat, and Susy was reluctantly following, when the sound of a voice behind her—the very voice she was longing to hear—started her. She turned to look round, and, missing her footings, fell into the water.

Another instant, and Charles had thrown off his coat, and, calling out loudly, "Tell the captain not to allow the wheel to stir, and to lower me a rope!" he sprang into the river.
But of her whom he was risking his life to save, he was unable to perceive any trace.

Judging that the current of the river might have carried her a little farther, he swam around the wheel, but still he saw her not, and despair seized his heart as he conjectured that she might be under the boat. He strained his eyes to see through the water, and at length discerned, far below the surface, what seemed the end of a floating garment lodged between the wheel and the rounded bottom of the boat.

If this were indeed the unfortunate girl, the least movement of the wheel must inevitably crush her, and Charles, in his terror, fancied it was already beginning to turn. He dived and clutched at the garment, but missed it. He rose panting, and almost exhausted; but scarcely waiting to get breath, he again plunged below.

This time his efforts were rewarded with success, at least so far that he was able to bring Susy's form to the surface of the water; but she seemed totally lifeless.

Charles was now so nearly exhausted that he had only sufficient presence of mind left to clasp Susy convulsively to him while he kept himself afloat by holding on to the wheel.

But this, his last hope of support, seemed also to fail him soon, as he perceived that it was now really beginning to turn slowly round.
By a desperate effort he struck his foot against one of the paddles so as to push himself as far from the danger as possible. As he did so something touched his head, and his hand grasped a rope. New life seemed now infused into him. He gathered all his energies, and fastened the rope round Susy's waist—conscienceless then entirely forsook him. In the mean time the witnesses of the scene, after giving Charles instructions to the captain, had watched his struggles and exertions with breathless interests.

The friendly rope had been flung to him again and again, but in the excitement of his feelings, and his semi-insensibility, he had been incapable of availing himself of the offered aid.

At last, perceiving that he was quite exhausted, and must inevitably soon let go his hold on the wheel, and then probably sink to rise no more, the captain judged it best to run the risk of moving off, so that a small boat could be sent to the rescue.

The result of this hazardous experiment was successful. Susy was raised by means of the rope, and a boat reached Charles in time to save him also.

Both sufferers were taken on board the steamboat, which now rapidly moved off to make up for lost time.

And thus, when his hero regained his consciousness, he found himself many miles from home. Of course his first anxious inquiry was for Susy, and when informed that she was rapidly recovering, his happiness seemed complete. He showed his contentment by turning over, and falling into a deep, quiet sleep.

About sunset a message came to him that Miss B.—desired to see him.

He found her lying on a sofa in the captain's state-room, which had been given up to her, her mother was sitting beside her. She looked very pale, and somewhat suffering, but she held out her hand very gratefully, while the tears stood in her eyes.

"Charles," she said, without offering a word of thanks, "I want to see a clergyman. Is there one on board?"

"I will go and see," said Charles, moving to the door; but a dreadful thought struck
him, he turned, exclaiming, "Susy, you do not think that—"

a clergyman."

Charles went, and soon returned, accompanyed by a minister.
"I thank you, sir, for coming to me," said Susy to the latter, as he entered. "I have a strange request to make to you. Would you object, sir, in the presence, and with the consent of my mother, to unite me to that gentleman?"

have them both, and had the first long, long before you had the last."
"But, Susy, you said yesterday—"
"Never mind what I said yesterday," interrupted Susy, with some of her old spirit breaking out. "Just mind what I say to-day. If I was a fool once, is that any reason I must be one always? I have always meant to be your wife—the only scruple I have is that I don't half good enough for you."

It is needless to say how this discussion ended. The reader has already divined that Charles continued his journey; and thus in the course of one eventful day, he risked a life, saved a life, made an impromptu marriage, and set out on a most unexpected wedding trip.

Parliamentary.
House of Assembly.
(Abridged from the Globe.)

Tuesday, May 4.
The Speaker took the chair at 3 o'clock.
Hon. M. Cameron presented a petition from Mr. Bruce, representing that from the off of fish and animal matter he had succeeded in producing a peculiar kind of manure, having the property of destroying the By and other insects, and asking a loan of £1,500 to enable him to erect machinery for the manufacture, to be repaid in the article manufactured, which would be placed at the disposal of the Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Norton presented a petition from Dun-as, against the incorporation of the Orange Association.

Mr. Whitney introduced a Bill to confirm a Resolution or By-law of the Corporation of Montreal, and to empower the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal, to erect a gallery across Capital Street, in Montreal.

Mr. Labege introduced a Bill to incorporate the Academy of Berthel.

Mr. Ferguson moved an Address to His Excellency for copies of any reports which the Chief Superintendent of Education might have made to the Government on the subject of Separate Schools.

Hon. J. S. Macdonald objected to the motion. He did not think it could be supposed that the Superintendent of Education had presented any reports which had not been submitted to this House.

Atty. Gen. Macdonald—There is a special report from the Chief Superintendent of Education for Upper Canada on the subject of Separate Schools, which was made long after the date of the annual report.

Hon. Mr. Aitken moved that on Friday next the House do resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, to consider a resolution for establishing a uniform tax on passengers and emigrants.

Carried.
The House then entered into the further discussion of the Usury Bill of Mr. Sol. Gen.
Rose's. In speaking of the debate, the Globe says:—

The debate was chiefly carried on in French.
Mr. Chapais delivered a forcible speech against the Bill. Mr. Sicotte, Mr. Dufresne and Mr. Talbot, spoke in succession on the ministerial side, apparently with the view of prolonging the debate until the arrival of Mr.
Galt and Mr. Fellows, who came up by the night train from the east. Mr. Turcotte and Mr. Jaccotte also spoke in favor of the ministry; and the whole evening was thus wasted by the very gentlemen who a few nights ago were so desirous of dividing upon the Bill.

When the vote was taken, six Upper Canadian members of the Opposition were absent, including Mr. Brown, who was in Oxford. Had they been in their seats, they would have reduced the ministerial majority to three only.
The division was a heavy blow and a great discouragement to the Administration. They dare not bring up the Bill again, and yet, if they do not they will prove their total inefficacy to carry on the public business and supply the wants of the country. When they abandon the work which they have so signally failed in accomplishing, the opposition will doubtless be prepared to take the matter in hand, and pass such a bill as Upper Canada requires—not such a monstrosity as that which Mr. Solicitor General Rose produced with so much labor.

Wednesday, May 5.
The Speaker took the chair at three o'clock.
Mr. Sherwood from the Select Committee appointed to try the petition complaining of an undue return for the county of Lincoln, reported that in consequence of the absence from the province of the sitting member, they wished to adjourn till Tuesday, the 25th of May.

Leave was granted accordingly.
Mr. Oimmet presented the following resolutions as the final determination of the Committee appointed to try the merits of the petition complaining of the undue return of the county of Norfolk.

Resolved—1st, That the sitting member, Walker Powell, Esq., was duly returned at the last election for the county of Norfolk.

Resolved—2nd, That the petition of John Boyd and John A. Axford, against the said election, is frivolous and vexatious.

Mr. Bellingham introduced a Bill to authorize a verification survey of the line between the north and fifth ranges of the township of Chatham.

Mr. John Cameron introduced a Bill to authorize and empower James Pearson to construct a rail of tramway, to connect a stone quarry with the Grand Trunk Railway, at Georgetown.

Mr. Benjamin moved for leave to introduce a Bill to incorporate the Loyal Orange Association of Canada. He said the object of the Bill was not to incorporate the body as one large corporation. All they sought was that each individual lodge should be permitted to possess its real estate, and for that purpose to be incorporated.

A division was then taken on the motion for the introduction of the Bill, which was at first declared negative on the following division: Yeas—Messrs. Aitken, Allan, Brown, Baby, Bell, Bellingham, Benjamin, Brown, Buchanan, John Cameron, Malcolm Cameron, Carling, Cayley, Attorney General Cartier, Clark, Connor, Cook, Daly, Dorland, Ferguson, Gould, Hartman, Hogan, Lacoste, Verguson, Macbeth, Attorney General Macdonald, McKellar, McKinnon, Mowat, Munro, Notman, Patrick, Playfair, William, F. Powell, Robinson, Solicitor General Ross, Rymal, Sherwood, Short, Sicotte, Simard, Simpson, Sider Smith, Sonerville, Talbot, Tett, Wall-bridge, Webb, White, and Wright.—51 Nays—Messrs. Biggar, Bourassa, Bureau, Burton, Burwell, Campbell, Caron, Cauchon, Chapais, Christie, Daoust, Dawson, Desauniers, Dionne, Dorion, Drummond, Dubord, Dufresne, Dunkin, Fellows, Foley, Fortier, Galt, Gaudet, Gaurreau, Hebert, John, La-Belle, Labege, Laframboise, Langerin, Laporie, Lemieux, John S. Macdonald, Mackenzie, McCann, McGee, Meagher, Morin, Pauet, Papineau, Pope, Walker Powell, Robin, Ross, Richard W. Scott, William Scott, Sincennes, Tasse, Terrill, Thibodeau, and Tur-cotte.—52.

The Speaker said his attention had been called to the fact that Mr. Fellows was not in the Chamber when the motion was put from the chair. Taking away that member's name made the vote a tie. He (the Speaker) voted for the introduction of the Bill.

The Bill was then read a first time.
At the request of Mr. Mackenzie, it was read at full length in English, and at the request of Mr. Labege, in full length in French.

Mr. Benjamin moved the second reading for to-morrow week.

Hon. Mr. Cauchon moved in amendment—That the Bill be not read a second time on Tuesday week, but that it be read this day six
